Dear Paul,

I believe you asked me, several years ago, if I knew anything about the Newport St. address Oswald used in Dallas. I do not know now whether it was North or South Newport, but I believe it was South. Looking for something else I ran into the FBI report on William Allen Sims, III, who immediately told the FBI in Beaumont that he recognized Oswald on TV as the man he saw giving out literature on Canal St.

Sims' N.O. address was 313 N. Rampart (very close to Novel's bar of a later day and on the edge of the Quarter). In addition to wondering about whether Sims [illegible] address and may be gave a Rampart address when there is no record he ever had one, I also find myself wondering whether Sims could just have been strolling down the street, had a casual glance at a stranger, and four months later making a positive identification.

Do you know if anyone ever checked the address and gave it the N.O. city directory for 1963 (in those years, there was one every 5 years only)?

Do you have anything on Eugene V. Dubos, M.D.? Whenever someone is going through the indexes, if it is possible to include this name, please do.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
